Undercover boss serengeti park ganze folge.

Undercover Boss (D) Staffel 4, Folge 3: Serengeti Park jetzt ansehen Als Undercover Boss wird Stefanie Hilger im Serengeti Park auf eine geheime Mission gehen. Der Serengeti-Park in Hohenhagen ist ein Freizeit- und Safari-Park für Klein und Groß und seit 40 Jahren ein erfolgreiches Familienunternehmen. Seit 1997 führen die Geschwister Veronica und Fabrizio Sepe und ihr Cousin Giovanni die Geschäfte. Auf dem 120 Hektar großen Areal leben insgesamt 1.500 exotische Tiere wie Tiger, Affen, Elefanten oder Giraffen. Damit ist der Serengeti-Park einzigartig in Europa. Ein weiteres Highlight sind die Übernachtungsmöglichkeiten im Park. Hier stehen 80 Safari-Lodges und 40 Masai Mara Lodges mit direktem Blick in die Tierwelt zur Verfügung. Im Park arbeiten rund 500 Mitarbeiter, den jedes Jahr rund 740.000 Besucher besuchen. Stefanie Hilger (38) ist die Lebensgefährtin des Inhabers Fabrizio. Als Diplom-Psychologin leitet sie im Serengeti-Park Seminare für Privatpersonen und Unternehmen. Mit ihrem psychologischen Background kann Stefanie Hilger die Arbeitssituation der Angestellten zielsicher einschätzen und weiß auch sonst genau, worauf es dem Boss ankommt. Jetzt tauscht sie ihre Business-Klamotten, die hohen Schuhe und ihr Smartphone gegen ein legeres Outfit, geflochtene Zöpfe, Brille und verleiht sich eine Sonnenbrille. Durch ein Nasen-Piercing und einen Fatsuit ihren Typ. Mit einer völlig neuen Biografie und unter dem Namen Maren Lenz schlüpft die Lebensgefährtin des Inhabers in eine neue Identität. Als Undercover Boss muss sie nicht nur ihre eigenen Ängste überwinden, sondern auch starke Nerven beweisen. Denn so nah wie jetzt, war sie den Tieren noch nie. Die erste Station führt Stefanie alias Maren ins Elfenbeinland des Serengeti-Parks, in dem fünf afrikanische Elefanten leben. Die Dickhäuter nehmen am Tag um die 200 Kilo Nahrung wie Heu, Stroh und Äste zu sich. Dementsprechend viel scheiden sie auch wieder ein äußerst arbeitsintensiver Putzjob! Als nächstes soll Maren Busfahrer Rolf unterstützen, der die Safari-Busse durch das Gelände steuert. Vorher muss Praktikantin Maren die Busfenster putzen, damit die Gäste auch während der Rundfahrt jedes Tier genau betrachten können. Rolf entgeht keine Schiere. Mr President, I would like to thank the rapporteur for his work. Als Undercover Boss wird Stefanie Hilger im Serengeti Park auf eine geheime Mission gehen. Deutsche TV-Premiere: Mo, 19.01.2015, RTL. Are those hippopotamuses that exchange blood? - Hips spend hours submerged to the nostrils in the tropical rivers because their thin skin is highly susceptible to burns. However, they love to spend time basking on sandbanks (or cannot be able to completely immerse their 1-ton-plus bodies). In both cases, when the skin is exposed in this way, the hippopotamus subdermal release a reddish secretion that keeps the skin moist and protects the hippo from UV damage. Due to the color of this secretion, it was once thought that hippos sweated blood. It has been suggested that these secretions also have extremely effective antibiotic properties, given that the wounds inflicted during fights seldom become infected, despite the less than savory conditions of the tropical waters in which they spend their days. Is That Lion in Our Camp? - If you hear a lion roaring at night (and, no doubt, you will), there is no need for concern, even if it sounds as if it is relatively nearby. A lion's roar can reach 115 decibels and is carried across the plains 5km (3 miles) or more; if you're close enough, you will feel your entire body vibrate. It is thought that both females and males roar to advertise their territory ownership to rivals of the same sex and possibly to recruit aid from distant companions. The Mystery of the Disappearing Wildebeest - There are a number of theories about why the zebra has evolved its stripes, but perhaps the most interesting is that posited by Dr. Tony Sinclair, long-time mammal researcher in the Serengeti. Using night-vision goggles to study the nocturnal habits of buffalo and wildebeest, which rendered the animals as black blobs against a green skyline, Dr. Sinclair was surprised when the wildebeest he was observing would suddenly just disappear, then reappear a little farther away, a few seconds later. After a few nights puzzling over this mysterious ability of the wildebeest to just "disappear," Dr Sinclair commandeered a powerful spotlight, which he switched on the moment the wildebeest did its disappearing act. Standing alongside the wildebeest was a zebra, which appeared invisible when seen through the goggles, its stripes a perfect camouflage for night, when predators, whose eyes may very well interpret light in the same way, are most likely to hunt. Black is - The poaching onslaught of the '70s and '80s decimated black rhino numbers in Tanzania, and within these 2 decades, this stately mammal species, which had grazed the plains for 4 million years (2 million years before the earliest species of lion or elephant made an appearance), looked close to being declared nationally extinct. Serengeti authorities had given up hope until two female rhinos made their appearance in the Moru area (Central Serengeti) in the '90s. Much to the delight of the park wardens (and, no doubt, the rhino ladies), a Ngorongoro bull - chased away by the dominant male in the crater and following traditional routes - made his way west to Moru, where he chanced upon his small but ready-made harem. Since Rajabu's appearance (as the wardens have named him), four calves have been born, bringing the estimated rhino population throughout the greater ecosystem of the Serengeti (most of them residing in Kenya's Masai Mara) to around 100. However, many of these herds, including Rajabu's, are too small for a founder population. In an effort to conserve these, South Africa, which, along with Namibia has made the greatest strides in protecting the rhino, offered to donate 45 black rhinos, 18 of them females, to TANAPA. The project will be supplemented by the rhino repatriation program currently in place at Grumeti Private Game Reserve in the Western Corridor, where captive-bred East African black rhinos have been returned to their homeland and are currently adapting to their new environment before being released. It's Not the Length, It's the Color - In 2004, researchers from the University of Minnesota placed four life-size male toy lions in the Serengeti - one with a long, dark mane; another with a short, dark mane; the third a long, pale mane; and the last a short, pale mane. Lionesses were initially fooled by the life-size toys - long enough for the researchers to observe them flirting. They were attracted by the lions with dark mane, regardless of length. When the researchers then picked up blood samples from royal lions, they discovered that the lions with dark mane had more testosterone and were able to resist better to be injured. Therefore, a litter produced by a male with blacks has a better possibility of surviving. Do your part for the conservation: shoot a cheetah - Tanzania is thought to hold 10% of the world's cheetahs - together with wild dogs, the most threatened carnivorous of Africa. The Serengeti Cheetah project is a 27-year-old study of individual cheetahs (all recognizable due to their unique spot models) managed by the retention project of the Carnivore of Tanzania at the Tanzania Wildlife Institute. But they need all the help they can get and tourists can be useful as the park authorities. With their Gheetah Watch campaign, anyone in Safari in Tanzania can help to guarantee their survival by adding to the base of knowledge. It is simple: if it identifies a cheetah, regardless of where, take a photo. (Whatever you do, do not disturb him in the process; not only are the shy cheetahs, but they hunt during the day and a vehicle can frighten his prey.) Take note where you are (your driver make him be able to help if you are not sure), as well as the date. When you come home, send an e-mail to your images of Ghepard together with the information "where and when" and the Safari company/guide you were, to carnivores@habari.co.tz; If you are fine with your photograph and the information published on their website, say, if the cheetah is identified, they will write to you and will tell you some of the story of that cheetah. Note: this information was accurate when they were published, but they can change without notice. Make sure to confirm rates and details directly with the companies in question before planning the trip. boss diesen kennen sogar die tiere! in der rtl-doku-soap als undercover boss "Musste am montag erstmals die freunden vom boss bossReason: the Serengeti-Park in Lower Saxony is a family business à è à èvelop and the chief Fabrizio Sepe (44). Your cousin Giovanni. In order to determine the weaknesses of the company, Stefanie Hilger (38), the life of Fabrizio's life, had to exchange Kuli with shit fork and work with some of the 500 employees side by side. There were more of fun! millions of spectators when she was disguised as practically Maren Lenz, a graduate psychologist, dressed in a work look with a casual dress, braided pier, glasses, nose piercing and fat. Otherwise Hilger offers seminars for private individuals and companies in the park, but she has not been able to approach animals so far. Hilger a Bild: à è à èvelop I have enormous respect. I usually work with people. Animals are so unpredictable, so spontaneous and then some are still so large. Cie has always shown me a lot of respect for me. The fear of winning was a real challenge for me, especially with Lions. "From any 750,000 people visit the Serengeti-Park, in which around 1,500 exotic animals such as tigers, monkeys, elephants or giraffes live. What was the internship, Ms. Hilger? It impressed me how much the employees are committed. Everything it is so real, love for animals, the initiative if it is blocked somewhere. For me personally and for my seminars I also took something with me: the great love of the team! If one of the zookeeper in the enclosure is *, then the colleague must be insured. They are totally well taught, they trust each other. The team system has impressed me a lot. The boss also noticed things that would improve: à è à tow For Elephant's nurse, we urgently renew, for guests we must make the bus tail more fun, which also make the easier job for employees. There should also be a traffic light that indicates where it is convinced in the park. The traffic light is built by an enthusiast employee of building wooden structures. I experienced it during the filming. The animals even know the boss girl. Head.
